To whom it may concern:

I write this letter to attest to, and to document a workshop held in Uspantán, Guatemala on July 9-10 of 2019. The workshop was held as part of the NSF grant Collaborative Research: Attrition in complex prosodic systems: tone and stress in Uspanteko (USP, Mayan), which included funds to hold three workshops over the lifetime of the grant in Guatemala in order to facilitate knowledge transfer to Maya communities in Guatemala. This year's theme was Pedagogía Lingüística (Linguistic Pedagogy), and was held at the Comunidad Lingüística Uspanteka (Uspanteko Linguistic Community), the body constitutionally mandated to support and develop the Uspanteko language.

This year's workshop was attended by 39 bilingual schoolteachers, and taught by Dr. Ryan Bennett (UC Santa Cruz), University of Arizona Graduate Research Assistant Megan Harvey, and myself. As part of the workshop, each day we had a morning coffee break and a working lunch. This was crucial because many teachers had to travel to the workshop, and it was more efficient to have lunch incorporated into the program at the conference location rather than lose time having people return home for lunch.

As documentation of the workshop, I have included our advertising flyer, schedule, diploma, and the sign in sheet listing the workshop participants. For any other questions or documentation, do not hesitate to contact me.
